Parents Helping Parents Support Group Logic Model

Domain: Precursor
Short-Term Outcomes

Mid-Team Outcomes

Long-Term Outcomes

1. Parents' Self-Efficacy
2. Improved Family Life
3. Improved Parenting Skills
4. Decreased Conflict
5. Increased Communication
6. Improved Children's Behavior
7. Improved Parent-Child Relationship
8. Increased Parental Confidence

Without Support, Parents may struggle with:
- Lack of confidence in parenting
- Difficulty in communicating with children
- Frequent conflicts with children
- Poor self-esteem
- Limited family cohesion
- Limited educational opportunities
- Limited social and economic opportunities

With Support, Parents can:
- Feel more confident in their parenting skills
- Improve communication with children
- Reduce conflicts with children
- Increase self-esteem
- Strengthen family cohesion
- Enhance educational opportunities for children
- Extend social and economic opportunities

Conclusion:
Supportive programs help parents develop their skills, improve their confidence, and enhance their ability to effectively communicate and connect with their children. This leads to a positive impact on the children's behavior, strengthened family relationships, and improved outcomes for all family members.